Hello [REDACTED],

I'll certainly try to help.

I have just spoken with Ian Hore-Lacey who indicated that:

Foratom is active, with WNA support.

The WNA information paper has just been updated, and this is available on the website.

Kind regards,

Stuart Cloke

Just wondering if you might be able to help me, or ask one of your colleagues with you in Hong Kong if they can help.

With the Chernobyl anniversary coming up and the increasing media focus on health effects/impacts of the accident is WNA planning any proactive briefing before the anticipated publication of anti-nuclear reports take hold? Or making any information available on the website? Or do you know if eg IAEA have any plans to do anything proactive?

It would be very helpful to know what the industry/others might be doing in this regard.

Many thanks in advance - if you/one of your colleague could email me during the week that would be very helpful.
